If elected as a board member of the College, you will have a conflict of interest if you have a personal or private interest or owe a duty to another organization or another outside duty that conflicts with your public duties as a board member of the College, including your fiduciary duty of undivided loyalty to the College, to act in the College's best interests, including the College's interest in upholding its duty to protect the public and its other statutory duties and objects, and your duty to maintain the confidentiality of information received by you in your capacity as a board member both during and after your term of service.

A conflict of interest exists if a reasonable person would think that there is a realistic possibility that your personal or private interest or outside duty would have an improper influence on your decisions or actions as a board member of the College.

A conflict of interest may take a number of forms. It may be financial or non-financial. It may be direct or indirect. It may be professional or family related.

A conflict of interest may arise from directorships or other employment; interests in business enterprises or professional practices; share ownership; beneficial interests in trusts; existing professional or personal associations with the College; professional or personal associations or relationships with other organizations or groups; or family relationships.

However, board members have an duty to declare any actual or potential conflicts of interest, including any conflicts that may materialize at any time during their terms of office, and they must take steps to resolve any conflicts arising in a way that protect the interests of the College and the public interest.

For example, if a board member has a pecuniary interest in a proposed contract or transaction to be undertaken by the College, the board member:

- must disclose the interest and the nature of the interest;
- must not take part in discussion or voting on the matter;
- must not attempt to influence voting on the matter; and

- must leave the meeting while the matter is being considered, if that portion of the meeting is held in camera.

Board members must also recuse themselves from participating in any regulatory decision in which they have an actual conflict of interest.
